

I want it on record that I am vehemently against relaxing the rules governing our state's "do not call" list. Telemarketing calls have virtually made having a phone impractical (something I was recently reintroduced to when we moved and got a new number that wasn't on the list). If the rules are loosened, I will likely resort to an answering service rather than a home phone.